Implementing HotDeskPlus:

Improves utilisation rates and reduces costs: Organisations are wasting millions on empty desks.* HotDeskPlus has proven to improve real-estate utilisation by as much as 57% and reduce real-estate costs by as much as 55%.

Increases productivity: 84% of hot deskers (where no booking system is available) spend more than 5 minutes looking for a desk, while 21% waste more than half an hour.**

Enables collaboration: Alienation from colleagues is the main hot desking issue amongst younger workers, with 33% of 18-24 year-olds citing it as their biggest concern.

Reduces stress: 67% of office workers said not knowing where they were going to sit each day would make them feel anxious. However, 61% believe being able to pre-book a workspace would reduce stress.

Supports working parents and carers: 52% of office workers said the option to work flexibly would most improve their work-life balance.

*the average London desk costs £8,279 a year; New York US$13,320; Sydney A$9,720, according to Instant Offices' Global Cities flexible workspace market review 2017. Original figures in USD. GBP and AUD conversion rate correct as of May 9, 2019.

**Brickendon survey of 1,001 UK office workers aged 18+. Conducted between March 14-19, 2019.

As an employee, whether you like to sit at the same desk every day, or regularly change your position in the office, HotDeskPlus allows you to book the required space (individual desk or meeting room) on an hourly, daily or weekly basis, relieving the anxiety associated with not knowing where you're going to sit each day.

As an employer, HotDeskPlus enables you to monitor your desk and meeting room utilisation and ultimately reduce real-estate costs by repurposing or removing unnecessary space. The simple and efficient booking and check-in options also help increase the productivity of your workforce by taking away the anxiety associated with finding a desk.
